

On A First Name Basis

By Norm Foster

Directed by George Fowlie

Starring:

Linda Lloyd-McKenzie
Richard Cook

David Kilbride, a successful spy novelist with writer's block, has received some devastating news he's kept to himself. He realizes he knows nothing about his housekeeper. Lucy Hopperstaad, his housekeeper of twenty-eight years, has her own secret that she's afraid to admit. As Lucy is getting ready to end her shift, David invites her to stay and have a drink. David is curious about the woman who has been tending to his house all these years. At first, it is difficult to get the very proper and rather prickly Miss Hopperstaad to relent, but, with the aide of a few shots of scotch, each tries to draw the life story out of the other as they move into ever more increasingly personal details of their private lives. But...as the night sets in and the drinks start to flow, secrets reveal themselves, for better or worse!

Bare, Bear Bones

By Michael Grant

Directed by Terri-Lynn Graham

Norman and Ruth are empty nesters who, after 25 years of raising children discover they have lost the spark their marriage once had. On the advice of a discount marriage councilor, they return to a place where they remember being in love, The Bear Bones Family Campground. Arriving late due to a less than road-worthy tent trailer, they set up camp in the dark. The next morning sheds light, not only on their campsite, but also on the fact that since camping there years ago with their children, Bear Bones Family Campground has also seen some changes and became The Bear Bones Alternative Lifestyle Campground. Unable to leave, due to a broken trailer, this very conservative duo must work together to avoid all "that flops and giggles" on the other side of the hedge while trying to save their marriage. Bare Bear Bones is a story of love and communication.
